From the Party Leader

Members, supporters, readers of Rise Britannia,

Since the last edition, the party has been able to slowly but steadily expand its operations. We were able to hold three regional meetings of multiple branches (Northern, Midlands and Southern England), and open up two new branches in Leicester and Stafford. Branches to become operational in Swindon and Bristol, Somerset, Sheffield, Liverpool and Scotland are still works in progress.

The regional meetings provided a fantastic opportunity for our various Officers and prominent members to address audiences and develop their own speaking and leadership skills in their own right.

The opening up of new branches with leadership teams in place has enabled us to increase the scale of our political activity, with our staple activity being tabletop stalls and street canvassing. Increased manpower has enabled branches to start engaging in community activities with more frequency, including getting involved as bystanders with local or county authorities.

We have also tabled the prospect of running at least one candidate at the elections in May. We are not interested in running paper candidates or running people who are not fit for the office for which they stand, and so it is more important that we spend the time genuinely cultivating good people before we take the responsibility and ownership of putting them on the ballot under the Party name.

At a party level, we have also been able to increase our media and PR output and quality, which has been helpful in generating new attention for the Party, something I have personally experienced with more frequency - I have, on multiple occasions now, been recognised when about my business, which means that the Party itself must be getting out there.

The main point I wish to stress on in this month's update is organisation.

Generating noise is comparatively easy compared to actually doing something useful with that noise. Nationalism has had a bad habit of being dominated by the idea that the way to force change is to make as much noise as possible. Often, this idea has been copied by watching the displays that you get from the militant left. But this is because of a fundamental misunderstanding in the nature of what the 'left' does. They do not use demonstrations as a way of generating power, but as a way of showing power.

The way that they generate power is through organisation. They spend countless hours out of sight talking, messaging, organising, communicating, and creating real world infrastructure. When they 'demonstrate', it takes them very little effort because all they are doing is proving that these things exist.

This is how nationalists must organise. They cannot use noise as a substitute for power or treat it as a way of creating power. Instead noise must only follow real infrastructure that can back it up. This is how a nationalist movement will be able to run the kind of sustained activity and campaigning that any kind of long-term victory requires. It cannot accomplish anything based on such a whimsical method of generating random noise from random people at random times for random reasons.

The Party will accomplish the task of creating genuine organisation by first creating a coherent ideological framework, which it has already done. Secondly, it will create structure, which it is already doing in the form of branches and party leadership. Thirdly, it will give that structure the ability to generate power in its own right, which is starting to happen as some of our branches are becoming more autonomous and capable of action without the direct intervention of the Party leadership. And finally, it will expand into a mass movement only once these three steps have been completed and thus the pre-conditions for a mass movement have been met.

Join us throughout 2026 as we work to move beyond step one, beyond step two, and start progressing into step three and four.

Communities

People need to wake up and recognise that even as we just get on with our daily lives our communities are declining fast. Communities up and down the country, cities, towns and country, are being torn apart by treacherous Labour government.

First they came for the pensioners, and then the farmers, then raise taxes with nothing to show for it, and now they are coming for your local corner shop and pub. These places are vital for everyone who lives in a community. They are where people meet up for a chat and to buy essentials, but the government is trying to close them and take away people's lifelines. Starmer only offers control without any of the results. As a consequence we are being pushed into a managed society where problems are covered up and people are abused in every imaginable way.

You never see your supposed representatives – like your MP – and rarely do you see even local councillors unless they happen to be genuinely dedicated ones. Instead most would rather spend their time elsewhere on expenses, even though the same people they avoided voted for them. We all know everyone wants change and we are all trying to do that. We all want our community to be a better place

In my community we have local volunteers who pick litter weekly to make sure the environment is cleaner. We have food banks where the homeless get free meals and a bag of food twice weekly. We have neighbourhood watch scheme so the neighbourhood is safer. Two churches are (cont'd) twice weekly for free clothing a chat and tea coffee etc. Play patch for children. Mental Health projects. Care for the elderly ie loneliness. Keep fit Zumba classes. Advice Centre. A meeting every 6 weeks were all residents attend to discuss the latest issues. A bike fix program. Tea and coffee evenings. All these projects are happening daily in our community and they are run by a dedicated team of volunteers these projects make a difference to local people.

These are the kind of things which the state should be helping us with instead of leaving it to people to create these things on their own and giving them very little resources.

But if we are to create these things ourselves, our people must play a part and so nationalists have a responsibility to get involved in their communities instead of just existing there and being carried along like passengers.

Neighbourhood watch

Myself and the committee came up with new strategy and to build community connections in 2026. We are starting a new 5 year strategy in which my scheme are the focus over the coming months. We will be holding on line events, increasing knowledge and providing tools to watch connect.

Over the past 14 months the team has consulted me and other associations, charities, and the Home Office and Government to develop a new 5 year strategy for my neighbourhood Watch.

Thankyou from the team for engaging with us on this journey. You have helped greatly in telling us what mattered in your surveys at the start of 2025 as well as some of you joining committees and steering groups, and thank you to everyone who participated in our strategy segment at our neighbourhood watch conference in September.

As we look around we believe in a Britain where neighbours look out for one and other and were people of all ages and backgrounds come together to build a safer stronger and more welcoming community, and where loneliness is replaced by trust and connections. In a fast placed digital world, taking time for simple human connections matters more than ever. A friendly hello, a helping hand, or a shared conversation can make a difference. Good neighbours turn streets into communities and help create places where everyone feels safe.

You need to be trusted and recognised and forward thinking and tackling today's crimes with fresh ideas. I will continue to strive to make my community so everyone can be a part of it and personally bring neighbours together and it will inspire more people to do likewise.

Veterans

It's really hard to accept that someone who served for their country could come home and lose everything. A veteran should never end up homeless. It's neglect that cuts deep, and words of thanks mean nothing without real support. The government only sees soldiers as expendable tools and in some cases doesn't even expect them to come home.

And if they do come home they abandon them.

This is all part of the fact that the government now uses the military not for the defence of the country anymore but purely for its own personal gain. The wars fought in are driven by corruption and greed and the objectives are usually selfish and to do with profits. We've seen with the war in Ukraine how so much money has been stolen and so many lives wasted. We've also seen it with Afghanistan - 20 years of war but all it did was leave that country and our own military in a worse state than to start with.

The Branch

The Branch has been getting involved in these community activities, as well as having a few opportunities to engage in canvassing, surveys and street activity over the winter. We are looking forward to our first national meeting for 2026 in March, which various people from the Branch will be attending, including me. We've also discussed opening up our activities to Bradford, Wakefield, and various other nearby towns and cities where we can generate pro-active leadership.

Plans for the Hull Branch activities in 2026 have started being formed, with our first official Branch Meeting in early February. It was nice to see some new faces and nice to see that they were willing to get involved in the plans.

At a Branch level we have discussed the prospect of running a candidate, our Deputy Branch Leader Barry McGrath, in the May elections, which will be a valuable training experience - that said, he has potential to do very well.

In Hull itself, the issue which still remains unresolved despite promised inquiries is sexual violence and sexual abuse - the notorious grooming gangs. We are taking steps to be in communication with other organisations in the community and city that are working to try and both resolve this problem as well as try and get justice for the victims.

Another issue that I will be keeping a close eye on are two large former department stores, both of which are in the city centre, and that the council has approved to turn into HMOs. The suspicion is that they will be tuned into 'asylum accommodation', with all of the problems that brings. It would be far better for them to be turned into actual social housing that could be used by Hull residents, some of whom have been waiting years for social housing. This is something which, if we are able to get someone elected to Hull City Council, could be pressured.

As usual there are various protests, demonstrations and similar events in Hull over February/March. Whilst we have not organized any of these, we may talk to people on all sides involved in them, with a view to finding common ground and identifying ways that we can turn anger into genuine change and constructive action.

We look forward to the national meeting in March, which many members of the Hull Branch will be attending, and at which a speech will be given by either myself or the Deputy Branch Leader.

London Branch street campaigning in Southwark

The London branch has remained active leading up to and throughout the New Year. Kicking the year off with a successful stall in Southwark on the 3rd Of January. Our team decided to expand our reach into central London, where we have received an equally positive reception from the public and achieved greater outreach. We have also welcomed quite a few new members to the branch over the past months.

We attended the Southern multi-branch meeting on the 6th of December 2025. One of our longstanding and loyal members, Piers Mellor, gave a brilliant speech on the history of nationalist politics in Britain and how we can learn from it to avoid making the same mistakes. As branch leader, I also gave a speech on the importance of duty and how it can be applied to achieve our collective goal. We listened to some great speeches by members of other branches and from the party leader. It was a great chance to build strong connections with our nearest branches and to ask any questions we might have. We have discussed potential collaboration with the Portsmouth branch in the near future.

Going forwards we have plans to expand the reach and activities of the branch and to perfect the efficiency of our individual members. Including bi-weekly canvassing, trialling new locations and creating an activity list for our members to engage in independently throughout the week. We are also looking forward to attending the national conference on the 14th of March.

Inaugural canvassing session with Stafford Branch

The party's newest branch launched in Stafford earlier this month. Our team brings together a wide range of campaigning experience, local policy knowledge and valuable political connections across the country. We hit the ground running on our first canvassing day, answering difficult questions from members of the public and a journalist from an online magazine with confidence and ease.

The momentum has continued with research into planning permission processes, attendance at council meetings and concrete plans already in place for further activism. Our first Zoom meeting was a success, collating ideas and galvanising our understanding and commitment to the National Agenda.

Future plans include similar canvassing sessions in Stafford as well as activity in wider Staffordshire, in places like Stoke and Burton. We will also be able to work with members and organisers in neighbouring branches like Birmingham branch.

It is a privilege to work alongside talented, professional and dedicated Nationalists supporting the National Rebirth Party's continued growth.

Here in the Nottingham branch we have recently met with members of the Leicester branch at their very first meeting, we have agreed to offer branch cooperation for future events. The idea of litter picking around Nottingham is underway and moving forward with locations and equipment being sourced.

We have a shared day of activism planned towards the end of February with members of the Birmingham Branch. We have also completed a sample run of new badges which will be passed to the party officials for their release at the spring conference.

Daniel Eccott,
Nottingham Branch

Due to my age I have the fortune to remember when the media was factual. The news at 9 O'clock on the BBC was full of facts with the newsreader not only speaking perfect English but was purely motivated in only representing the facts of the day.

However, that was back in the 80's and 90's and somewhere from then to now we have fallen into sneering cocky we know better than you left wing broadcasters with merely their interpretation of the facts and it seems some news items are left off altogether if it does not fit the narrative of the channel.

Indeed hard facts are difficult to find.

What about the BBC programme Question Time for example? The question really is how do they get away with a left wing woke audience and a panel to match, making the programme worthless to watch, the audience apparently selected at random from all sides of the population seems to be vetted by Labour and The liberals with only the odd level headed person slipping through their nets.

In fact the BBC clearly promotes Hamas, is pro Palestine and shows Donald Trump in a negative way whenever possible, even if this is done in the famous Fake news way. We must all remember whatever we think of the BBC or whether we even watch it we do have the privilege of paying £170 a year for privilege. This is totally shocking.

So if we look at the main tv channels that give us the news we have the usual suspects, BBC, ITV, CH4, CH5 and Sky news. None of these are neutral that just supply facts, they all seem to have an option on what's happening not the reality.

The worst offenders seem to be the good old BBC and Channel 4, sometimes its just fun to watch these two with the news and see how long they go before they can blame the problems of the world on either The Climate crisis, Brexit or Donald Trump.

So as we are told all the economic problems were due to Brexit.

The high prices of food is due to climate change. I hope none of you are still driving a petrol or diesel car? Don't worry the channels are a wash with adverts for electric cars, weirdly driven by the standard British family without a white person in sight.

The instability in the world is obviously all down to Donald Trump, and there was nothing wrong with Joe Biden's mental state!

Maybe you will remember Y2K? For those of you slightly younger than me this was a story given out by all forms of the media from about 1997 telling us none of the worlds computers were ready for the year 2000 which we were told would bring about armageddon, planes would fall out of the sky, life support systems would fail and everyones home PC would crash, such was the onslaught of these scare stories there was frantic system upgrades and panic through the globe which resulted in just one thing at 12;01 on the 1st January 2000 and that was Bill Gates had become richer than ever!

Don't forget the Global warming hysteria we have had thrown at us, let look at some of the fears we have had with that. Acid rain? No that never happened. Pacific islands totally submerged by the melting ice caps by 2010. Mount Kilimanjaro loses all its snow by 2020. These are more scare stories used by the mainstream channels.

So maybe we should buy a paper each day for the news. The British newspapers are considered to be the most right wing in Europe, with the likes of The Sun, Daily Mail, the Express and the Times with only the Daily Mirror and The Guardian on the left. So most people that buy papers are buying right wing ones at a ratio of 3 to 1 this maybe a result of the dreadful news we have on TV possibly? (cont'd)

However the heyday of the daily paper is over and sales from all the papers is steadily declining mainly due to the prices. The famous phone hacking with the News of the World has obviously helped erode the publics trust in papers too. There have been some new style papers that have come on to the market with the Independent in 1986 and then the i paper, which oddly seems anything like being Independent in nature as it is owned by a Russian and a Saudi multimillionaire.

So where do we go for actual news?

There is a newish news channel in Britain as you may know, GB news which is available on all platforms and seems great if you are a Reform voter but again this is another biased channel offering its own view on the news but this time from a right wing perspective. Interestingly they have met with fierce opposition from all the other news channels trying to get their funding cut and closed down due to their right leaning views, so this shows clearly the two extremes we have.

So next we must look at the internet,

We have X or Twitter, since Elon Musk bought it, things have improved and it is a useful platform to access information, also helpful is Youtube with plenty of podcasters offering another side to current situations and generally show balanced view points.

There are some other online news agencies like Routers that can offer some fairness in reporting. Some others that are actively using social media platforms to get a message out there are Turning Point, Urban Scoop and Matt Goodwin to name a few.

So as we look to where we have come from in the last 30 years there has been a seismic shift from once trusted BBC to actually now having to question everything we are told on TV, to actively search for the truth online instead. This is really a sad state of affairs but we all have to be smarter, not blindly accept everything we are told and question the information broadcasted to us if we really want to find the truth.

Street Canvassing in Leicester

The Leicester branch has had a strong start right from the get-go. Our branch initiation post ended up generating a substantial amount of attention and brought wider visibility to our local activism. As it stands now, the original post from the NRP X/Twitter account stands at 3.5 million views, which was then shared to further platforms, including locally based political pages.

I'm expecting that we can leverage our branch's unexpected publicity and get some effective local activism done. Due to Leicester's tight PSPO restrictions, we are currently chasing for a permit to expand the options at our disposal for political canvassing. In the meantime, we have opted to navigate around these restrictions by performing standless surveys and questionnaires in the town centre.

We have plenty of interesting local and party-wide projects in the works, which I believe will keep our branch busy and make a positive impact for the party as a whole.

Looking forward to seeing what we can get done.

Happy New Year/Turn of the Wheel Folks. I hope you all had a good festive season with your Kith and Kin and are now ready for the year ahead.

Although we're still in the Wintering Period, where most things slow down before rejuvenation in Spring, there has continued to be a lot of work behind the scenes at the National Rebirth Party (NRP), both at National and Local Levels.

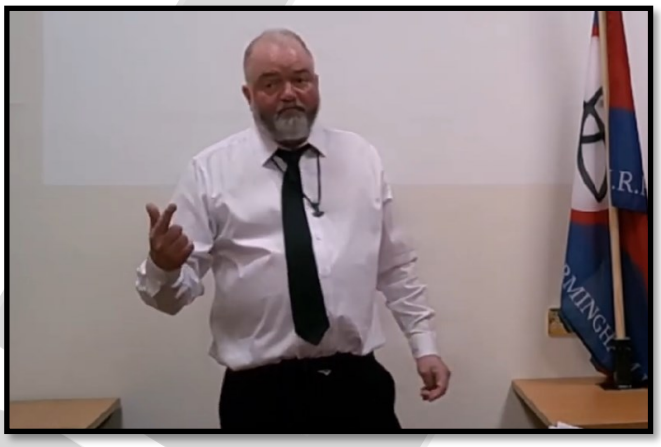

First of all I would just like to mention the inaugural cross -branch meeting which took place in Leeds in November, 2025. I travelled up along with NRP Birmingham stalwart Luke Ward, and I'm so glad I did. It was a great turnout in plush surroundings. Impeccably hosted, as always, by NRP Deputy Leader/Leeds Chairman, Dave Smaller. The speeches that took place were out of this world. For some it was the first time, although that was hard to believe as they came across like seasoned veterans. There's a massive talent pool within the NRP. Add to that a high element of friendliness, and it was a great day.

The next national level meeting will take place in Coventry in March. Coventry is where I was born and bred, so this will be a very proud day for me. A good turnout is expected, with a view to getting people together in preparation for the summer and any potential election campaigns in May.

Also, at the end of February the Birmingham Branch are hoping to set up another stall with the Nottingham Branch, this time in Nottingham.

At Local Level, branches have been springing up throughout England. This just shows that people are waking up to the problems this Nation is facing and are willing to get out and do something about it, rather than be all talk and no walk.

The newest Branch to be established at the time of writing is the Stafford Branch, which had its first meeting in February. It included people who would previously have had to travel to Birmingham/Coventry way to get involved, but now that they have a Branch established of their own, there are more opportunities for them to grow and carry out work in Stafford and wider Staffordshire.

These fresh branches, along with the already established ones are all cogs in a machine, all working in unison with each other and all dedicated to the same endgame. Under the steady leadership of Alek Yerbury, once the NRP are firing on all cylinders, there will be no stopping us. 2025 was a good year. 2026 will be even better.

Social Media and its Role

I would like to start by saying this - Social media is a tool, a weapon to be used against our enemies, but weapons don't fire themselves, nor do you need 1 million weapons while only having 2 actual soldiers in the field. The power of social media shouldn't be underestimated, but neither should it be overestimated.

Widespread "propaganda" first made an appearance in 1440 with the appearance of the printing press. Christian realms could now share their beliefs on a larger scale by the printing of the bible en-mass.

Since the introduction of the social media, papers have almost been replaced. Social media has given every man and woman a voice, no matter the class or background. This platform has helped spread ideas, both good and bad, to millions of people with a click of a button. Whilst this in theory should be a good thing, time has shown again and again that it's not. People have become so engulfed in social media that it's almost like they forget there's a world outside of it.

This is particularly a problem with the "online right" a group that borderline worships the power of media and disregards the power of action. They believe, wrongly, that the wheels of history will no longer be turned by man, but by tweets or posts. They have misunderstood what propaganda is, and what it should be used for. Propaganda alone doesn't win wars, nor does it topple regimes, nor does it build a genuine movement. Actions do. As the old saying goes "Actions speak louder than words."

Many often use the example of Joseph Goebbels, as a justification of the importance of propaganda. This is both right AND wrong. As they have chosen to acknowledge part of its success, but not the other. Goebbels used propaganda on a level never seen before, and was hugely successful at what he did, whether one agrees with it or not. Spreading the message to the masses in a way that couldn't be ignored. BUT, Goebbels was only successful due to the existence of the machine that supported him. Goebbels ran a newspaper Der Angriff from 1926 onwards which in its early years achieved very little, as there was no results to his words. It inevitably became popular with the rise of the party he was part of.

Cross-branch meeting, Southampton, Dec 25

Imagine if Goebbels decided to take the approach of "moving the Overton window" with the Weimar Republic (1918-1933) a government that was basically the polar opposite of the NSDAP. They were never going to change their way of ruling just because a newspaper said so. The only way was to REMOVE this government.

Another example of this would be Benito Mussolini (1883-1945) fascist dictator of Italy (1922-1945). People like to look at Mussolini's final form, but forget is actual rise to power. Many people forget that Mussolini not only started as a socialist but also ran his own newspaper called Il Popolo d'Italia. Unfortunately for Mussolini, his newspaper wasn't the deciding factor, this newspaper alone didn't launch him into power. In fact it was widely ignored besides a niche clique - much as the online is.

The moral of this story is that propaganda alone doesn't win battles. Simply shouting into the abyss will not change anything. We don't need 1 million "propaganda experts" on X, just as these regimes didn't need 1 million newspapers. This is not to discredit the use of propaganda, or the internet, after all a state will inevitably fall, and most likely not even get into power, without efficient use of propaganda. It's important not let propaganda be the deciding factor in your approach, you must take action, as this not only creates propaganda, but it also validates it.

To fast forward to the modern day, we have completely lost our senses when it comes to gaining power. Social media although initially a boon for nationalism, now seems to be something that holds it back. Certain voices claim social media is the be-all-end-all. This may be correct for their role in the movement, but it's not correct for their vast majority. People have become lazy, insisting that they are helping move the wheels of history whilst posting online, and have become so obsessed with this that not only do they refuse to work, they have built and image of the outside world that isn't true.

Recently I was listening to a space on X, and there were multiple men claiming they were too afraid to do activism, or too afraid to even leave the house - due to them swearing that nationalists would be stabbed in these places. This is crazy to me due to the fact that the NRP has men AND women who do activism in these very cities - London, Birmingham, Manchester and more. Either these individuals are just making excuses, OR, they have spent so long online that they genuinely are scared of going outside, due to the echo chambers they find themselves in, and are afraid of people combating their views.

And on that note, I will repeat the phrase once more.

"Actions speak louder than words"

The recent months have been a productive one for the Portsmouth branch of the NRP. We've seen our numbers grow, and gradually our activism has increased.

The Party held its cross branch meeting in Southampton on December the 6th, a much shorter journey for us than Leeds! This was a great chance for people who aren't local to the area to see what our part of this beautiful country is like. This conference succeeded in adding several new members to the branch.

We've held multiple stalls , particularly in the historical town of Havant with its beautiful architecture and history - also the first place to elect a Reform MP. Here we found not only disillusioned Reform supporters - who were now thinking they had made the wrong choice - but also Labour Party supporters, with whom we found much common ground economically.

Members of our Portsmouth Branch street campaigning

As for the issues we've had relayed to us? Immigration is always a concern, but we actually found that the biggest complain in Havant was actually the economy - people noticed they had less money, young people looking for first time jobs complained about the difficulty of getting into the labour market.

The National Agenda of the Party is the only mechanism to offer them a genuine solution, because it ignores the pitfalls of neoliberal capitalism and also understands the reality of race, nation and nature. Even if people do not immediately accept it, it is a framework that a person, once aware of the facts, will recognise as true.
I look forward to further development of the Branch and attending our national meeting in March.

Campaigning in Central Manchester

For too long has the North West of England been left to the decadence of liberalism. Our people maimed, our history degraded, our futures starved, and for too long have nationalist movements who proclaimed to be the voice of the working class, the patriots of this great nation have been left behind to deal with rot that festers through Marxist policy and antifa thug while they focus on more "affluent targets".

No more.

Being made Manchester Branch Leader of the National Rebirth Party at the beginning of this year, I have set out on a campaign with my team through 'Operation: Third Wave' to establish dominance over the North West England by year's end. From Chester to Blackpool, from Liverpool to Staffordshire, Me and my team will not rest until we give a voice back to the working people of this island we call home.

We have already kicked off this year with a Stall in Manchester city centre in which great conversations were had with members of the public and leaflets handed to passers by. We had attendees and our Hull branch leader speak at Hugh Anthony's demographic replacement protest. We've had members attending protests whether it be the Best Western hotel in Fallowfield or the Cresta Court Hotel in Altrincham. Going beyond Manchester one of our members has been making a presence in Warrington through leafleting in neighbourhoods and the town centre and getting involved with local little picking groups. With all that in January, and more already planned in February there's nothing the National Rebirth Party won't achieve in the North West.

Entering this new year the plans for the branch moving forward is to continue organising in person meetings with members from around the local area.

This is to get to know each individual and what they can bring to the branch to help it grow in the coming future. We've had a few new members on board since the last publication, so this will be a good opportunity to increase our activity.

The branch will hold public canvassing stalls over the next few weeks in Sunderland and Newcastle to showcase what the party has to offer and to answer any questions the public has concerning the current state and future of our country, socially, politically and financially. Members from the Branch will also be attending the national meeting in March.

Local community projects will also come back onto the agenda in order to position the party within local interests in order to make an impact politically for the ongoing future. Sunderland/Peterlee area despite supposedly electing 'change' in the form of Reform UK, has yet to see any real difference between the old and the new. It is one of Britain's most deprived and ignored regions, and our National Agenda is sorely needed.

Policy Paper

Questions and Answers on Principles and Policy

A selection of questions and answers on principles and policy. If you have a question to submit, you can do so by contacting risebritannia@nationalrebirthparty.org.uk

Would you scrap private finance for national infrastructure?

National infrastructure is, as the name implies, of national importance. It is not something which should ever be left to market forces and the state must assume responsibility for providing it, which we already clearly state in our agenda when we discuss utilities and public transportation.

The question then is of whether private investors should be able to finance national infrastructure (which implies that they can then operate that infrastructure for profit).

The long-term goal is to eliminate this. National infrastructure should not involve any element of private finance because it should not be operated for any profit beyond that for future investment. In the medium and short-term, it may be that some degree of private finance is still required as the economy is re-organised, but there should be limitations in finance so that national infrastructure that does involve private finance is always majority owned by the state (as in a controlling share).

For national infrastructure which already exists and is privately owned, the intent must be to bring it back into state hands.

There is no real evidence to suggest that privately financing infrastructure leads to savings in initial cost either. The argument is that allowing it incentivises firms to make lower offers. In practice what it has caused is for low bids to be made in order to obtain contracts, and the budgets quickly explode. Because of the consequences of cancelling projects halfway, the state then ends up paying even more money than initially planned just to complete the work.

In general, infrastructure belongs to the people and therefore the state. It is important to recognise that under the current economic system private financing does exist and is required, which is why it is important to once again re-iterate that in the short and medium term it may still be required to some degree, but the ultimate goal is to eliminate the need for it.

For empty commercial properties, would we bring in a requirement for them to be re-let, or failing that turn them into social housing?

Housing in Britain is in crisis. There is a serious shortage of social housing, driven partly by mass immigration but primarily because of a lack of housebuilding at the same time as social housing has been sold off to private hands. The crippling side effect of this housing shortage is also a massive increase in property prices and rents.

So it is imperative to make more housing available to people, especially affordable housing.

It is absolutely an idea worth exploring that empty commercial properties that cannot be re-let or given any commercial use be turned into social housing. The limitations are likely to be structural, that commercial properties are not necessarily designed to accommodate people and so some would require significant renovation.

The main hindrance to this all is planning rules and regulations. It delays changes and makes it harder for property developers to implement changes in a reasonable time scale. Therefore, in order to realise the use of commercial properties for residential purposes we would have to overhaul planning regulations to eliminate much of the planning process and give property owners (or state actors) much more leeway to just impose changes.

As much as this might upset certain people who would not want certain properties to be converted, it is in the best interests of society that empty properties or properties facing dilapidation are given a useful function. It is in nobody's interest for properties to sit vacant for years with no use. It is hard to say at this stage whether there would be an element of compulsory purchase of properties involved, but more than likely it would depend on the ability of the property owner to fund its conversion. It would in fact be in the best interest of the owner of an un-let or unused property to have it converted into social housing.

Policy Paper

Questions and Answers on Principles and Policy

Would tax exiles be banned from public services in Britain?

Public services in Britain should exist for British people - and they should also be for British people who, to the best of their ability, contribute to those public services. This is in line with the general principles of the National Agenda which promote rights alongside duties to society.

It is absolutely right to make the case the tax exiles not be permitted to use public services in Britain which they are not actually contributing towards. The question is, how would this be enforced?

To make free public services available for citizens only is easy, because you have a clear distinction between a citizen and non-citizen, so having something to identify a person as a citizen is an easy way of drawing a distinction.

A citizen who is a tax exile is harder to enforce, because you effectively have to be able to know, at the point of use, whether a person is a resident or not. For most public services, they require some kind of registration prior to use (education etc), so you can identify someone's residency before giving them the access. The biggest challenge is when dealing with the use of the NHS, because people do not plan to have medical emergencies, and it is not feasible to ask for proof of address etc. when someone is presenting at a hospital.

The only feasible way to actually achieve the desired outcome is to eliminate the concept of 'tax exile' altogether. If a person is simultaneously a British citizen and has absolutely no record of paying any kind of tax in Britain, then that person must be interrogated as to why. If a person is not receiving welfare, and not paying tax, but DOES exist and is a citizen, then clearly the person must be engaged in either tax avoidance or outright criminality, otherwise they would have no other source of income.

It is reasonable to argue that a person who is a citizen who intentionally avoids tax obligations is inherently failing in their duties as a citizen, and therefore is justified in being stripped of certain rights in response.

So in summary to achieve the desired outcome of preventing tax exiles from abusing public services, it would be necessary to address the existence of 'tax exile' itself.

Would you give free train travel to old age pensioners?

The National Agenda proposes that utilities and public transportation be placed into public ownership. This would enable the state to reduce the cost of public transportation in general. At present old age pensioners are eligible to buy a pensioner's railcard, giving a discount on most fares.

Rather than providing outright free travel, it would instead be better to simply work to lower the cost of fares for all people. Such a thing as a pensioners railcard could still exist to provide a discount, but the overall cost of the fares would be lower.

Therefore the question becomes:

How to lower the cost of train travel altogether?

By ending the franchise and privatisation system and placing all the railways into state ownership, it provides the ability to recover operating costs on inner city lines and subsidise the costs on long-distance lines, which used to happen in the past. By effectively loss-leading on the most expensive fares, it would enable the overall cost of the average fare to come down.

The removal of an incentive for private profits would also work to reduce the overall cost of operating the railways, which would again drive the overall cost of fares down.

It would also be appropriate to redirect the money from exorbitant rail projects such as HS2 into the existing infrastructure, providing more trains, cheaper trains and more lines for use. This could shorten journey times by allowing for more direct travel, which again would bring the cost of individual fares down.

Heretical History

By William Mulligan

The modern world rests on a narrative of history which is mythological in form. Its aim is essentially to weaponise the historical dimension, the past, to alter our self conception in the present. First they label all counter narratives to the regime orthodoxy as revisionism. There is a purposeful confusion in this. One could get lost in endless layers of revisionism of revisionism of revisionism. It is devoid of truth.

Our understanding of history must be truthful. It must not fall to the same mistake of past wherein one or many have sought to suppress truth seeking in favour of ideology or where one or many regimes have compartmentalised certain parts of history from another to favour a certain narrative. Any basis of good governance must be built on truth and therefore able to continue without controlling what is truth in favour of lies.

We are here. This is the religion of our time and to stand against the idea that Europeans were particularly evil among all races is the heresy, so if you will, here is an account of heretical history.

The Turks raped Armenia wholesale, raped, pillaged, displaced, starved, forced to walk barefoot miles unending. They killed fathers and then took the daughters for themselves, starved them half dead and as a whole emaciated, leaving mutilated boys on the side of the road which was drenched in the blood of eastern Christians. This wasn't for the sake of it. This was their sovereignty over Armenia, their agency. Ottoman Turks had a longstanding history of mutilation, sexual abuse, orphaning violence. It wasn't limited to just Armenia.

The Turks raped Armenia wholesale, raped, pillaged, displaced, starved, forced to walk barefoot miles unending. They killed fathers and then took the daughters for themselves, starved them half dead ...

It wasn't just the product of some partisan coup or oligarchy of the young Turks. No, for many years Ottoman aggression was aimed westward. Women and girls taken into sex slavery, boys again castrated, or indoctrinated with religious education to fight the sultan's wars.

Heretical History

This was their doctrine. In Serbia today there is a tower of skulls standing, constructed of the cadavers of Europeans, a sick warning of what submission entails. Their material ambition went even further in this time post 14th century to include a de facto embargo and land blockade of Europe. It was an explicit strategy to starve Europe so that this process could take place on the wider continent and it is to our 'evil' colonising ancestors we owe thanks to say it was ineffectual. Indirectly Ottoman aggression and European mercurial ambition led to the first sailing ventures around Africa, which made Islamic ambition benign and infantile, earning the Ottoman Empire the label of the Sick Man of Europe. I wonder when the regime wishes to paint this instinct as evil, they consider the alternative to be better? Whether they would prefer we had let the Ottoman ambition reach Vienna and Paris?

The Barbary coasts, aptly named, enslaved millions of Europeans. Even the regime of the Mamluks was comprised of slaves. There was cannibalism in Africa and Papua New Guinea until we among many other laws forbade it and enforced a natural order with the now controversial penal laws. I wonder if the regime today would say that the barbaric practices of cannibalism would have been preferable to the fair penal laws of the British Empire? The constant warring tribes of America, now forced into submission, we stopped just the same. When we look to the far east in history we observe the civil wars of China that produced massacres of the most industrial kind, among some of the heights of civilisational achievements albeit. The fact of history is that progress was slow where human savagery across cultures was ever present and overshadowing progress.

The Barbary coasts, aptly named, enslaved millions of Europeans.

There was cannibalism in Africa and Papua New Guinea until we among many other laws forbade it and enforced a natural order with the now controversial penal laws...

Our presence in India was small and efficient yet it installed equal rule of law, that same rule of law which stopped widow burnings, rape, standardised the age of marriage over time to curtail abuse present.

The fact is of history, none of the qualities of civilisation which we take for granted today were present in any major or general way until there was a Europe emboldened to demand so of the human race.

I will celebrate till death parts me from the world, the laying asunder of Islamic imperial ambition, and so should you all! The achievements of the British Empire far outweigh even that of Rome, Greece, the sciences of the Middle East, that of China and Japan. There has never been a more moral force in the world than Great Britain. Where was found Newton's physics, Darwin's evolution, common law systems, parliamentary systems, infrastructure en masse, just war, and prosperous peace of our kind.

It wasn't just our own domestic prosperity we had striven for. We brought India out of constant cycles of famine, with famine codes which provided good honest work and equalised the minimum quality of life on the continent, the welfare state! We built infrastructure in Africa and India, and even our own lands in Canada and Australia. We did all of this not fully for profit, or for chauvinism. We did it out of the same sense of altruism in us for our fellow man which abolished the slave trade, Islamic empires, and often our own fellow European empires which when having overstepped our own sensibilities we died to fight.

...none of the qualities of civilisation which we take for granted today were present in any major or general way until there was a Europe emboldened to demand so of the human race.

They want to curtail our neo renaissance. This great and ongoing movement of will and capital in the transnational elite is the greatest threat to the cyclical rebirth of the British and European mass, and what is required of us is no less than a coup of the grandest scale, intellectual fortitude, ruthless pragmatism, the intersection of analysis, the linguistic mind, that virtue of science in us, of organisation and grand ambition, kinship, the casting away of arbitrary judgment, virtues in morality and the willingness to stand for our identity, not in reaction but a truth deemed immutable that we are indigenous, regardless of what challenge it faces.

We must be willing to say what must happen, that we must undo mass immigration, and the laws of the land which stand in stark contrast with the spirit of our constitution, that we must be willing to conjure depth of mind and heart, that we must be willing to hurt feelings, and protect the meek amongst us.

India is a core case for our good actions. Our presence in India was small and efficient yet it installed equal rule of law, that same rule of law which stopped widow burnings, rape, standardised the age of marriage over time to curtail abuse present. Our presence fundamentally changed India for the good. We resurrected old dead languages, religious texts, and artifacts of cultural significance. Within their Hindu religion our rule was justified and morally righteous. I have no white guilt, because my ancestors imprisoned and executed criminals, brought industrialisation, scientific achievement, the rule of law and order! The abolition of slavery, abolition of castration, and the abolition of genital mutilation.

These same 'evil' colonizers the regime hates today were the very men which have enshrined in international law checks and balances against nation state the same as individual to prevent the very thing they are supposedly guilty of. We abhorred, despite precedent, these continuous patterns of injustice and evil. I have no white guilt, because my ancestors imprisoned and executed criminals, brought industrialization, scientific achievement, the rule of law and order, the abolition of slavery, abolition of castration, and of the abolition of genital mutilation.

Legal Reform: Recognising the Reality of Collective Responsibility

By Alek Yerbury,
Party Leader

The National Agenda recognises the need for legal reform (Demand #8 and #9), and that the current system clearly isn't capable of preventing crime and atrocity from occurring – and preventing is better than reacting. To that end, we have to diagnose what is failing in the current system, which is this:

Our legal system effectively treats serious crime (including terrorism) as something that happens in a vacuum, and refuses to accept or address the collective culpability of the groups, families, or communities that enable and inspire serious crime to occur.

If a boy is brought up by his parents to believe that violent sex and domestic abuse is acceptable, then the parents share culpability if he becomes a rapist.

If a person's religious community is telling them that murdering or attacking unbelievers is acceptable, then that whole community is culpable if that person commits a shooting spree of unbelievers.

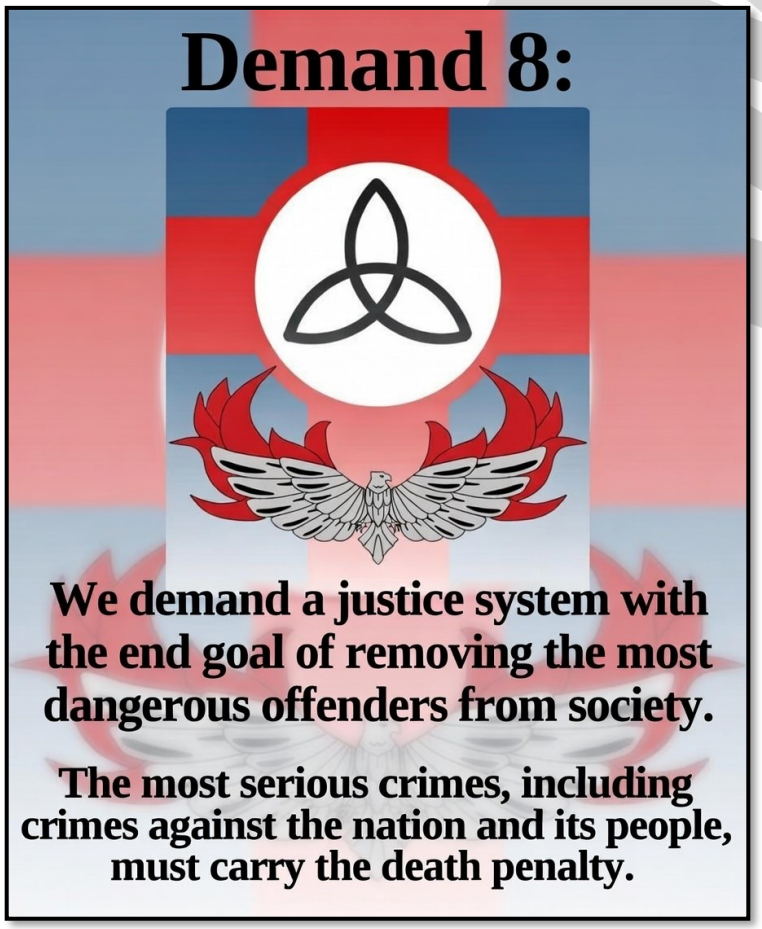

If a person's associates are telling them that extorting money from people or dealing drugs is okay, then their associates are collectively culpable if that person becomes a usurious loan shark or drug dealer.

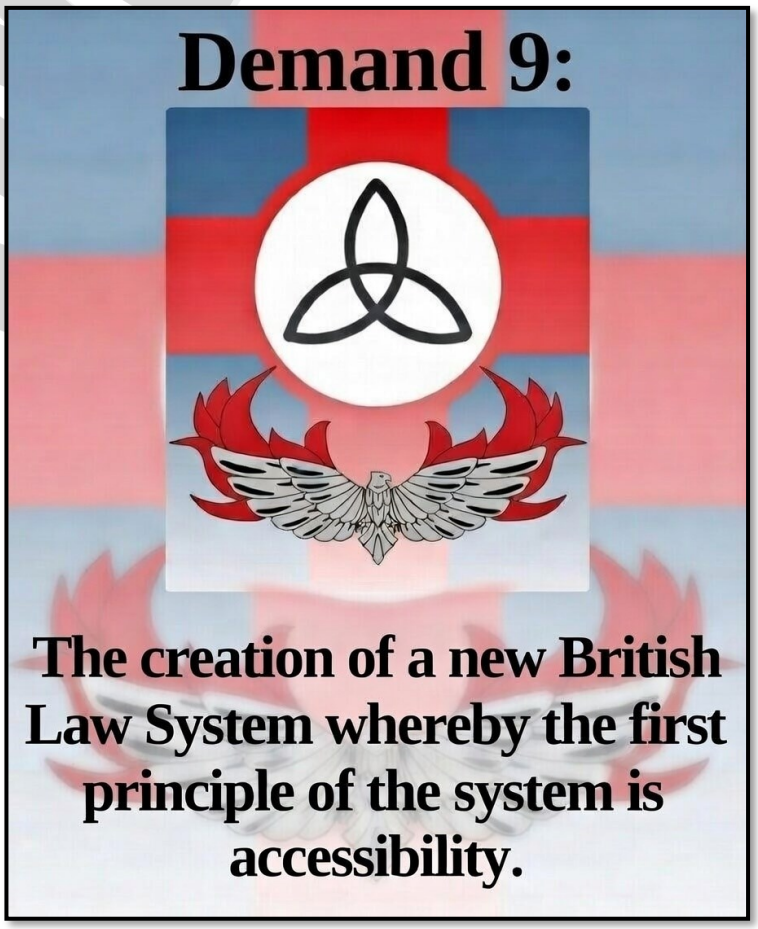

If a person's religious or ethnic community is telling them that genociding certain people is okay, then that whole community is culpable for war crimes.

Our current legal system fails to recognise this. It understands the concept of incitement, but does not recognise the very real danger of COLLECTIVE incitement.

Collective incitement can only take place if people are allowed to create sectarian communities of any description. By sectarian communities, we mean the creation of insular, minority-focussed groups of any description that see themselves as 'separate' from normal society or seek to remove themselves from it. It doesn't matter what the reason or demographic is, the danger is consistent.

Where these kinds of sectarian communities already exist, they must be broken up and either (cont'd overleaf)

re-integrated into the national community where this is possible, or removed from it completely when it isn't. When serious crime and atrocities occur from members of communities like this, the entire community must be collectively sanctioned. After all, they are choosing to create that community in the first place, therefore they are being punished for a choice, not some inherent characteristic. If those individuals do not want to be collectively held responsible, then they have a choice to disassociate themselves from that group.

The only way to fully eradicate serious crime and atrocity is to eradicate all of the support networks, institutions, and associates who enable it to occur. Crime does not occur in a vacuum, especially in an age where communication is so easy, and it can no longer be treated like it does.

If a person's religious or ethnic community is telling them that genociding certain people is okay, then that whole community is culpable for war crimes.

Our legal system effectively treats serious crime (including terrorism) as something that happens in a vacuum, and refuses to accept or address the collective culpability of the groups… that enable and inspire serious crime to occur.

An Honest Politician

By Alex Bramham,
Party Member

An "honest politician" may sound like a contradiction in terms, but it is what our people yearn for, and deserve. In this article, I address three major obstacles Nationalists face to speaking the truth when promoting our National Agenda: fear of consequence, lure of 'sensible' Nationalism and temptation to compromise.

In a society where using the wrong pronouns or asserting the reality of ethnicity can end a career, telling the truth is not without cost. A cost well known to the great Enoch Powell:

"How dare I say such a horrible thing? How dare I stir up trouble and inflame feelings by repeating such a conversation? The answer is that I do not have the right not to do so. Here is a decent, ordinary fellow Englishman, who in broad daylight in my own town says to me, his Member of Parliament, that his country will not be worth living in for his children. I simply do not have the right to shrug my shoulders and think about something else." (cont'd overleaf)

An Honest Politician

Neither do I. Neither do you. Speak the truth not out of personal gain, but out of duty. Be the Briton your ancestors would be proud of. You do not have the right not to say what must be said.

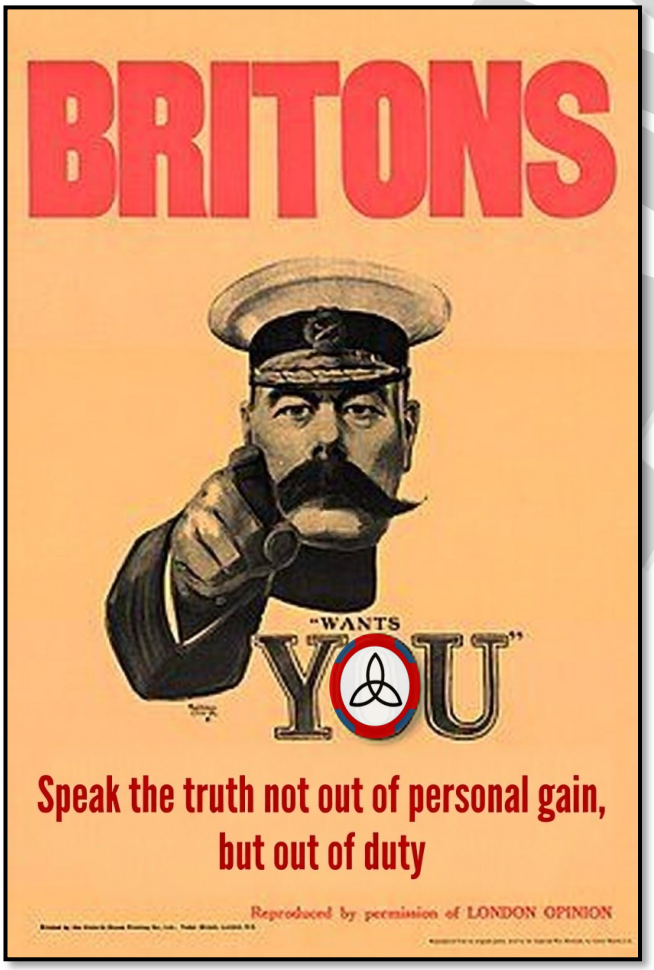

A recent fad in prominent Nationalist circles has been to deceive others into joining a political party by promoting a false front. Fake Facebook groups, fake X campaigns, fake demonstrations, even entire fake conferences; all a ruse. Such a strategy cannot succeed. It never has, never will, and never could. Our people deserve better. Our people see straight through it. To illustrate the absurdity of such an approach, invert the scenario. Suppose a pro-immigration group were to launch a campaign in your local area to preserve a heritage site.

You join in good faith and they win your trust by securing funding to save the site. Once their real motivation comes to light, would you support their calls for increased immigration? Or would you feel cheated and leave? This so-called 'sensible' Nationalism was doomed from day one. Our people cannot, and will not be tricked.

If a political party demands you to suppress your true beliefs or bullies you into silence, you were never, really, a member at all. In stark contrast, the National Rebirth Party has never indulged in such frivolity. Our National Agenda is there in plain sight; our people visible in our communities; our goals transparent.

From expenses scandals to insider trading, corruption is so normalised amongst careerist politicians it seldom even surprises the general public. Generous donors with vested interests lurk round every corner. A friendly face presents a Faustian contract: to sell your soul, sell your principles, sell your people out. Our people deserve better than that. They deserve hard work, sacrifice and commitment in public service, not puppets with slogans. Campaigning without large financial backing can sometimes feel demoralising, but authenticity is priceless. Authenticity radiates, inspires and illuminates the lies of others. Meeting by meeting, speech by speech, debate by debate - slowly, but surely. An authenticity which the legacy parties can never match.

Rome was not built in a day; there are no shortcuts to power, but the National Rebirth Party has the right foundations in our National Agenda. The courage, conviction and determination we need to build on those foundations can be found in us all. We are, after all, British.

Reflections on Service as a Councillor: Lessons Nationalists Should Learn

By Lewis Allsebrook,
Amber Valley Borough Council 2008-12

As I reflect on my years in local politics, I'm filled with gratitude for the opportunity to serve the people of Heanor West on Amber Valley Borough Council. Elected in 2008 as a British National Party (BNP) councillor for this vibrant working-class ward in Derbyshire, I dedicated myself to championing community needs until 2012. Those years were a testament to the power of grassroots nationalism, where putting Britain and local residents first can lead to real, positive change.

Today, in 2025, with nationalism evolving through emerging parties like the National Rebirth Party or the Christian Nationalist Party, I want to share my experiences as a councillor, the commitment it requires, and an encouraging guide for those inspired to follow a similar electoral path. It's a rewarding journey that builds stronger communities and amplifies patriotic voices.

Our local blog, Amber Valley Matters (now gone unfortunately), was a key platform for documenting these efforts. It chronicled everything from daily activism to major campaigns, serving as a voice for local nationalists. I've looked back at what we wrote there in that time period to refresh my memory and hopefully provide realistic input.

MY PATH TO THE COUNCIL CHAMBER: FROM ACTIVIST TO ELECTED REPRESENTATIVE

My involvement started in the mid-2000s, closely following the aftermath of the 7/7 London bombings, I was driven by a desire to address the challenges facing ordinary Britons—issues like job security, community regeneration, and preserving our national identity.

…closely following the aftermath of the 7/7 London bombings, I was driven by a desire to address the challenges facing ordinary Britons...

As an activist with the BNP, I contributed to campaigns that highlighted the failings of the establishment. For instance, in 2007 we wrote a post on our blog, later a webpage "Trough Gate; Lemmings jumping off a cliff," exposing the expense scandals of Labour MPs in Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire, such as Liz Blackman claiming for luxury items like DVD players and bed linen, and Mark Todd's £25,000 in refurbishments—all on the taxpayer's coin.

We framed it as Labour "rats abandoning the sinking ship," urging voters to "kick them in the ballots" by supporting BNP candidates like Mark Bailey (our candidate in Erewash) and Richard Fellows (our candidate in South Derbyshire). This kind of bold, factual critique resonated and helped build our local profile.

...we wrote a post on our blog… "Trough Gate; Lemmings jumping off a cliff," exposing the expense scandals of Labour MPs in Derbyshire and Nottinghamshire, such as Liz Blackman claiming for luxury items like DVD players and bed linen, and Mark Todd's £25,000 in refurbishments—all on the taxpayer's coin.

Reflections on Service as a Councillor: Lessons Nationalists Should Learn

Organizing energetic leafleting drives was another cornerstone, for example in 2008, Jacksdale and Westwood was leafleted in one evening. A team of us covered the entire neighbourhood in a single session, distributing materials that emphasised putting British workers first and opposing EU overreach. These hands-on efforts weren't just about spreading leaflets; they sparked conversations and built lasting supporter networks (every leaflet importantly included a well-designed contact form, helping us build our support base).

Winning Heanor West in 2008 was a highlight, fuelled by local support for an alternative to the mainstream parties. As a councillor, my role was deeply fulfilling: representing around 5,000 residents on Amber Valley Borough Council, I attended full council meetings, scrutiny panels, and planning committees. I focused on practical, positive outcomes—regenerating Heanor's Memorial Park with better play areas, pushing for community consultations and upgrades to make it a safer, more enjoyable space for families.

Similarly, Heanor Regeneration was a regular theme, we advocated for repaving parts of Market Street, Derby Road, and the High Street with durable red paving, alongside initiatives like art from local students in empty shops to revitalize the town centre and boost the "Shop Local" scheme, which encouraged residents to support small businesses through prize draws.

We also added our voice to help find sponsors for sponsored blooming traffic islands through partnerships with Tesco, turning neglected roundabouts into vibrant community features. And we objected to developments that risked our greenbelt, ensuring affordable housing on brownfield sites, as in 2010 when the local BNP championed Brown Field Development and Affordable Housing to counter Labour 'Tunnel Vision', we argued against Labour's narrow focus and promoted sustainable growth.
I amplified nationalist priorities locally, like supporting British jobs through campaigns such as "British Jobs for British Workers," where we highlighted the need for UK-based manufacturing, and criticised foreign labour undercutting locals.

We gathered signatures for "Bring Our Boys Home" petitions to honour our troops, we set up stall with a trestle table and custom banner in towns across the county. People in Ilkeston lined up and 'signed up' to sign troops out of Afghanistan, and Alfreton said loudly 'Support our Troops - Bring our Boys Home NOW!'," we collected hundreds of signatures at stalls to end the Afghan war and focus on British interests.

We gathered signatures for "Bring Our Boys Home" petitions to end the Afghan war and focus on British interests.

Reflections on Service as a Councillor: Lessons Nationalists Should Learn

On the council, I voted for initiatives like the Ripley Gateway, which involved selling land to Morrison's for a supermarket but ensured replacement of open spaces with superior facilities—a new park with cricket pitches, football fields, a skate park, and more—plus funding for the Codnor relief road to reduce traffic and boost local commerce.

It was about being a proactive voice—tackling parking issues (exposing Derbyshire County Council's boast of 3,000 fines in 2009), cutting wasteful bureaucracy like the "Politically Correct Bureaucracy and initiatives wastefully spending finite resources, and fostering community pride through events like the Mercian Regiment march in Ripley, where 5,000 locals turned out in 2010. Serving Heanor West taught me that effective representation blends local action with broader patriotic values, creating lasting improvements for families and businesses.

THE HIDDEN HOURS: THE REAL TIME COMMITMENT OF BEING A COUNCILLOR

Being a local councillor is often seen as a voluntary role with a small allowance—mine was only £3,600 annually (about £300 a month)—but it's far more immersive and rewarding than that.

According to the Local Government Association (LGA), UK councillors typically invest 22-28 hours weekly (though I doubt that most of the LibLabCon's zombie councillors put that time in), but my experience aligned with that, often exceeding it during busy periods. The hours aren't just about meetings; they're about building connections and delivering results. A standard week for me looked like this:

Heanor Regeneration was a regular theme, we advocated for repaving parts of Market Street, Derby Road, and the High Street with durable red paving

I voted for initiatives like the Ripley Gateway… ensured replacement of open spaces with superior facilities—a new park with cricket pitches, football fields, a skate park, and more.

Council Meetings and Preparation (8-12 hours):

Monthly full council sessions lasted 2-4 hours, but poring over agendas, financial reports, and policy documents added 6 -8 hours more.
Committees on planning or regeneration meant evening commitments, allowing me to balance a full-time job (it should be noted, I live in a two-tier local government area and I never succeeded in getting elected to the County Council [but did come close], should you serve at county level all the meetings generally take place in the daytime Monday to Friday, something to consider if you can't give-up full time employment it may be a struggle to juggle this, but employers are legally obliged to allow time for civic duties).

Constituent Engagement (6-10 hours):

This was the most gratifying part—handling casework through emails, calls, and 'surgeries,' though I encouraged residents to meet me face to face at our monthly paper stall in the town centre if they wanted to talk without prior arrangements. Residents shared concerns from housing repairs to anti-social behaviour, and I'd follow up with officers (people who work for the council) or advocate at meetings. "Walkabout Wednesdays," was an initiative I tried in 2009, it was hands-on, spending afternoons patrolling streets, identifying issues like litter or safety, and working to improve communities directly.

Reflections on Service as a Councillor: Lessons Nationalists Should Learn

Community Initiatives (5-10 hours):

Blending council work with activism, I'd organize stalls, petitions, and support events like the Mercian Regiment march in Ripley, once local activists and I did a sponsored walk in aid of regeneration work at the Cromford Canal. Leafleting drives built momentum and direct feedback.

Research and Admin (4-6 hours):

Staying informed on issues like EU energy policies, or local extremism reports (Polish immigrants drinking in alleyways after dark frightening some local residents, which we pushed the Police to deal with), plus media responses and party coordination. During elections, like the 2009 Euros I stood on the East Midlands BNP list where we celebrated strong Amber Valley votes (and of course the BNP won two MEP seats elsewhere in the country), this surged with door-knocking marathons.

Overall, I clocked 25-35 hours weekly, fitting it around work. Flexibility was key—evenings for meetings, weekends for events—but the payoff was immense: seeing parks improved or petitions succeed made every hour worthwhile. It's a role that demands energy but offers profound satisfaction in serving your community.

A GUIDE FOR ASPIRING NATIONALISTS: NAVIGATING THE ELECTORAL PATH

If nationalism resonates with you—valuing sovereignty, community strength, and British priorities—the electoral process is an empowering way to make an impact. My time in Heanor West showed that with dedication, you can win hearts and seats. Here's a positive, step-by-step guide based on my experiences, encouraging you to step forward.

Launch Your Campaign:

The Road to Election: Target a ward like Heanor West, where voters seek change on immigration or local decline. Craft a positive platform, like our "British Jobs for British Workers" push. Run campaigns intensely over 4-6 week periods: aim for 1,000 doors knocked, host stalls, and engage in debates. Budget smartly—our efficient 2009 Euros spending maximised votes. Expect 40+ hours weekly sometimes, but any additional time someone spares should always be appreciated. Authenticity wins: share your passion for Britain, and voters respond.

Excel in Representation: Serving with Purpose:

Once elected, embrace the role fully. Prioritise residents—attend meetings diligently, scrutinise budgets for efficiency, and advocate subtly for nationalist goals. Build cross-party alliances for wins (this does not need to be formal, as they say keep your friends close, and enemies even closer), like regeneration projects. Commit 20-30 hours weekly, tracking progress through resolved issues and community feedback. It's about positive delivery: better parks, safer streets, and proud communities.

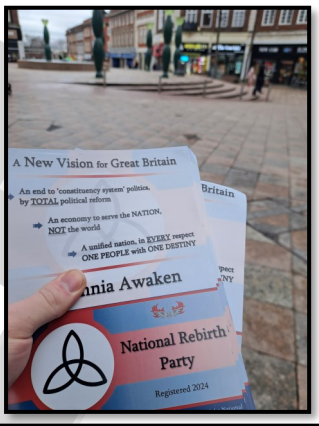

Overcome Hurdles with Resilience:

You'll face opposition, but view it as motivation. We turned protests into support by focusing on democracy and results. Stay positive—network widely, maintain health to avoid burnout, and measure success by community uplift, not just headlines.

Run campaigns intensely over 4-6 week periods: aim for 1,000 doors knocked, host stalls, and engage in debates.

Expect 40+ hours weekly sometimes, but any additional time someone spares should always be appreciated. Authenticity wins: share your passion for Britain, and voters respond.

It's important not to make everything about the work, it's healthy to have a drink with like minded people after a group activity or meeting, maybe shoot some pool. Make sure your also building unbreakable relationships with other nationalists, because its together that we build the momentum needed to win, and you want those activists to come back again, don't you!

Sustain and Evolve:

Keep learning; Keep learning; parties change, so adapt while staying true to your values. Emphasise patriotism's positives: economy, culture, unity. Explore modern platforms like the National Rebirth Party or the Christian Nationalist Party for broader appeal. Remember, it's service-driven—ego takes a backseat to people.

My councillor tenure in Heanor West was enriching, proving nationalists can thrive electorally and transform lives. If this path calls to you, seize it—Britain benefits from dedicated voices. In writing this piece I went over old records writing for the Amber Valley Matters blog/webage, looked though old case emails and archived council reports, even though the BNP fell apart in the end, we did achieve a lot of good, inspired a broken community with a fresh take on local stories and our campaigns united and uplifted. As we always used to say, "Onwards and Upwards".

The AI Question

By Alex Bramham,
Party Member

Drones were once the cause of much moral panic and calls for a blanket ban. This proved not to be necessary as sensible legislation ensured the protection of our military bases, airports and other areas of risk. Although concerns remain surrounding their use supplying prisoners with contraband, common sense prevailed. Is AI of that category - a useful and entertaining technology for our people, or something much more sinister? I argue both.

When Channel Five News reported on AI this week, they showed a parody clip I had produced using GROK as an example. Nobody really believes Narinder Kaur was dragged onto a plane or Sir Keir Starmer spends his weekends in a woman's bikini because they see a clip of it online. The introduction of community notes has largely resolved the issue of fake news on social media. Violence, pornography and parody accounts are flagged accordingly, ensuring adults can for the most part filter out material they find objectionable. Whilst AI has widened the opportunity to produce such media, the content itself is nothing new. Despite this, media coverage of the debate remains centred on the nature of the content, neglecting far more concerning potential consequences of the technology. In this article I aim to explore examples of these and propose how we should respond as members of society and the National Rebirth Party.

An important aspect of AI is the sheer speed of generation. Edits that once took a team of specialist experts some length of time are now available at the fingertips of anyone with a smartphone, immediately. Distorting a speech in parliament, concert performance or football match to make them appear as clowns is all in good fun. But what happens if a more sinister motive is at play, editing in guns or terrorists instead of clowns, and in real time? As we have seen from tragedies like Hillsborough, panic spreads and herd instinct kicks in. Even the most tech-savvy would not sit around to take their chances.

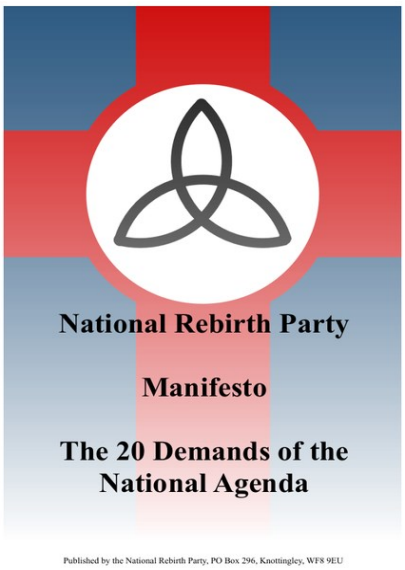

As we have seen from tragedies like Hillsborough, panic spreads and herd instinct kicks in.

...media coverage of the debate remains centred on the nature of the content, neglecting far more concerning potential consequences of the technology

Other AI dangers, whilst less dramatic, should be properly researched. Children, the elderly and mentally impaired are particularly vulnerable to forms of deception, exploitation and neglect made possible by the technology. Much as fast food provides an unhealthy substitute for real food, fast friendship provides an unhealthy substitute for genuine human interaction. A digital friend that knows what you like, always tells you what to want to hear and never lets you down, offers immense appeal to the isolated. It remains to be seen how common addiction or dependency emerges within and outside such isolated groups, but much can be done today to prevent it. Amplifying the voices of children in the care system, staff and residents in care homes, and clients of mental health support groups is necessary.

For all these dangers, the breadth and depth of information available through AI offers extraordinary opportunities in education and entertainment. It must, like any technology, be harnessed in the interests of our people, not the whims of private profiteers.

Globalism and Nationalism: Pros and Cons of a Future Imperium

By Mr B.

The raging debate between Leave and Remain has brought polarised castigation to the forefront of civil society. It has rallied said society behind diametric talking points. Bringing us to the brink in terms of a National Community and even collapsed the Establishment in its best known form (Labour - Tory same old story).

Many see a small insignificant England and its adopted Celtic children on the world stage, sabre-rattling as if it's still relevant as a total farce. In such a way, that many hold the whole political and economic situation in low esteem.

Many now identify as a small minded Patriot come Civic Nationalist, worried about the annexation of Ukraine and Greenland. These people are unable to understand what the advantages of a Pax Americana and Eurasia mean and imply for our race, plus adjacent Eurasian races. Nor are they able to comprehend why such forces need to exist in order to balance and stabilise the world.

Many others identify as some form of liberal or socialist vacillating from wanting to upend a fictional colonial West that only exists inside their heads or in the dreams of the America First and Z War movements. They do this while supporting a rules based order of said colonial powers in the same breath. These colonial powers only represent, the sum of all their fears. Only when certain sections of the MAGA movement and Eurasianist movement hold the reigns of power in either sphere. Other than that, the zeitgeist is that of progressivism closer to their own ideology than not.

...Leave and Remain... Has rallied said society behind dia-metric talking points... and even collapsed the Establishment. In its best known form. [Labour - Tory same old story]

The lessons of Empire Building of Anglo Nations from Alfred the Great's England to The British Empire to Modern America.

This reddened yellow faction also leans towards an open and lawless Europe while still defending the petty patriotisms of Ukraine and Greenland from this new form of imperialism. (Which in essence is a return to the natural state of governing the planet as it were before the post war settlement and Rothschild's abstraction we call social democracy.)

In the same way those of the new populist right would also rally behind Greenland and Ukraine, with the defining difference being support for Israel or Palestine, respectively.

These two opposing forces within this dialectic have arrived at dead ends. They lurch towards reabsorption into the dead dream of the European Union or an even bigger delusion that England without her colonies and in some cases without her Celtic brethren. Attached to the same broken economic systems, can stand tall alone.

There is a third option that leads to a fourth option, given the climate and political situations we may find ourselves in. Possibly at some point in the future.

It rests on learning from East Asia since the 1940's. The lessons of the European integration experiment. The lessons of empire building of each lifecycle of the Anglo Peoples' Empires. From Alfred the Greats' England, Norman Rule, Angevin Empire, Tudor Dynasty through to The British Empire and even modern America.

We start by saying history is cyclical, there are seven stages to a nation or empire. England ended its last cycle as the British Commonwealth, [originally the Empire] back in the 70's.

Globalism and Nationalism: Pros and Cons of a Future Imperium

Thatcher and the rise of the EU along with New Labour, followed by 14 years of Tories. Was very much a part of the rise of the EU and NATO or the Rules Based Order or Judeo-Christian West. A completely alien and non-British civilization cycle, we were vassals as much as we were a power unto ourselves, strong through dependence.

This civilization we were a part of briefly, won out against communism. Yet it is currently buckling, ever since the self inflicted wound of aiding the Arab Spring and Normalising with Turkey. These events then led to the migrant crisis.

Because of Brexit and Trump, we have broken with this imperium and rightly so. As it was a land empire and shopfront for the international money lenders and Zionists.

We now have an opportunity to aim towards the integration of the wider English Speaking World if we apply the correct nationalist ideologies, ergo, removing the banking families' influences root and stem. (Perhaps in the future leading to full military occupation of Israel-Palestine and Arab Syria.) This would manage populations that present as threats to this new order. Without falling back to the failures and mass murder of our dated and now laughable fascist predecessors.

What I propose is simple: The full integration of the English speaking world into a Canzuk nation. Whether as a EU style Trading Bloc or as an integrated Federation.

Harnessing the access Britain has to the EU and Central Asia through the Pan European Mediterranean Agreement. While taking the opportunity to use the weak pound to provide the perfect staging post for mass exports. This would create ground in which to grow our exports and manufacturing output, with partners in Europe, North Africa, Asia Minor and the Black and Caspian Seas.

As such we would be the largest trading nation within the TPP (Trans-Pacific Partnership), having the benefits of globalism in terms of external trade and acquiring goods and services from client states. Without the need to invade or become aggressive with Pacific-Asian or South American nations.

We now have an opportunity to aim towards the integration of the wider English Speaking World if we apply the correct Nationalist Ideologies, ergo, removing the banking families influences root and stem.

We would be consolidating our people by ways of language and by extension preserving a white super majority in all English and Celtic nations. Yet, making the absorption and assimilation of non-whites who share similar values in the case of Sikhs and Buddhists, much easier without the threat of mimicking liberal DEI drives. As they'd be loyal to the memory of the Empire their ancestors once fought for. In the case of say territories such as Nepal and Hong Kong.

While in other cases people who share our religion, such as westernised Nigerians and Orthodox Christian Assyrians. Can much more readily find their place in the hierarchy of Peoples. Additionally they'd be a welcomed and regulated boon rather than a barbaric invasive threat. As the present provable negative realities of the migrant crisis and suggested replacement conspiracy represent.

We would unleash the benefits of both free trade and nationalism, through the consolidation and preservation of our race as masters of our own English Speaking, Celtic Blooded Imperium. Along with the preservation of multiple peoples such as the Indigenous Folk in Canada and Australasia. Thus fulfilling the duty of care to those Loyal to us without the Suicidal Empathy currently destroying our National Community.

The next two topics that need to be addressed is our economic model and relationship with our other Anglospheric Imperium. I propose the adoption of 'Developmentalism' as we will be a new nation, coming from the ashes of the last British Empire.

Globalism and Nationalism: Pros and Cons of a Future Imperium

We should be state-directed, with private enterprise harnessed for the social body, similar to that of Japan in the post war period. The rapid development of Hong Kong, Singapore, Taiwan and South Korea occurred after a period of authoritarian rule in each nation.

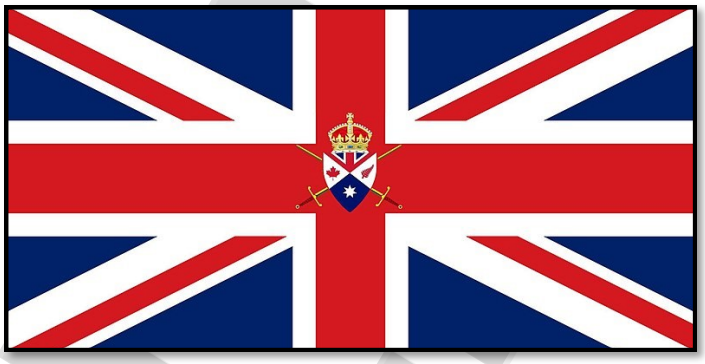

While the encouragement of cooperatives, plus the nationalisation of the utilities are party policy, these models are suggested in order to create the most beneficial jobs for our working people. In the short term, quality of life is the rationale that guides the preference towards these policies currently.

We should not then be married to the orthodoxy of Socialism, given its economic pitfalls present within the Phillips Curve, ergo the economic insanity of aggregate demand over organic buyer markets. This leads to higher state investment in artificial markets, so that Peter has to borrow in order to pay Paul, which eventually busts leading to Stagflation like the 70's. This is also evident in the current state of affairs in the Post COVID economy, or even why the Soviet economy fell in the 90's, cries of Capitalist Encirclement be damned.

While accepting the Pareto Principle, meaning that 20% of input creates 80% of output in the vast majority of economic arrangements, meaning full socialism is virtually impossible and laid bare by this simple equation. As well as this, all three volumes of Das Kapital are rendered obsolete, through Marxist ramblings about surplus value extraction and the impossibility of a democratic economy.

This Canzuk nation should adopt Asian-style capitalism that encourages growth, trade, manufacturing and exports, yet results in socialistic outcomes that benefit the National Community at large. In doing so, it becomes a perfect system for a third positionist lead global Empire.

With this settled, the fourth option previously mentioned and second point of contention becomes apparent. In the potentiality that this Canzuk Nation becomes the chief player in Asia-Pacific and South American economic affairs and becomes a military counterbalance to the threat and spread of communism (or rather bureaucratic centralism) from China. We then have an opportunity to further push for the (cont'd)

British Commonwealth nations to become another large customs union. Hopefully by this point, the nation would be able to offer the United States, Pax Americana equal partnership to Canzuk.

In a new global arrangement, through their acquired territories such as Greenland, Panama and Venezuela and other South American nations liberated from Cartelism and Stalinism, like Columbia and Mexico, we can further consolidate again, building an Anglo-Pacific Partnership. The Pacific-Asian nations would be the economic bedrock for Canzuk and continental American nations, as the bedrock of Pax Americana.

We should offer open hands of friendship to the Republic of Ireland and equal membership within this potential power bloc. The Home Rule Debate would be upended as they are absorbed into the wider Anglo-Celtic world and as this arrangement replaces the stability the EU once provided for Ulster and the Republic.

Canzuk, Ireland and Pax Americana, through a reformed commonwealth akin to the once-proposed Imperial League can work together in joint endeavours, such as engaging in military operations to establish orange republics for the Boer and Cape Afrikaners respectively.

Canzuk, Ireland and Pax Americana… can work together in joint endeavours, such as engaging in military operations to establish orange republics for the Boer and Cape Afrikaners respectively.

Globalism and Nationalism: Pros and Cons of a Future Imperium

We could also take Israel-Palestine and the Levant from Zionists and competing Islamists and supply aid for Christian nations in central Asia under attack and diplomatic missions with Russia or Eurasia or whatever power exists in the future in those regions, protecting our Christian brothers.

Perhaps, this could even mean waging wars against Burkina Faso, while funding joint development projects in Nigeria in order to protect the Christian population. Furthermore, providing support for Ethiopia to restore Abyssinia and take back the coastal regions would put an end to the ethnic conflicts that drive today's East Africa's mass exodus of its fighting age men into Europe.

Ultimately we must become a larger power unto ourselves and pursue an economics that has proved itself successful in rebuilding broken nations, while also pursuing nationalist-minded aims without becoming despotic, tyrannical and most importantly redundant.

The synthesis of post colonial global democratic and economic institutional arrangements, with classical empire building and pursuit of nationalist aims. Must happen, in order for our Anglo-Celtic race to survive the current political upheaval and social onslaught.

The Twenty Demands of the Nationalist Agenda

1. We demand that only people of British heritage or lineage shall be inherently entitled by birth to be British citizens.
2. We demand that foreigners whose presence is harmful to the interests of the national community be expelled, without exception, from Great Britain. Those who enter without permission shall be expelled by default and prohibited from ever returning.
3. We demand that only British citizens be permitted to vote or hold public office at any level.
4. We demand that no foreign treaty, alliance or undertaking be entered into or continued unless it serves the interests of the national community. This includes the distribution of British money to foreign nations.
5. We demand that all citizens will have equal rights, and equal duties to society. Those who refuse to carry out their duties will be stripped of their rights.
6. We demand that every British citizen has a duty to be productive, to the best of their ability. All honest work is honourable, and work is a duty.
7. We demand that all British men must perform some kind of military service for a period of at least 18 months, to the best of their ability.
8. We demand a justice system with the end goal of removing the most dangerous offenders from society. The most serious crimes, including crimes against the nation and its people, must carry the death penalty.
9. We demand the creation of a new British Law System whereby the first principle of the system is accessibility.
10. We demand freedom of religion for all British people, so long as the religion does not threaten or harm the interests of the national community. Any religion which does this shall be prohibited.
11. We demand the continuation of state-funded education. We further demand that the state should establish and finance a series of schools of excellence, which will provide scholarship education of the highest possible quality, free of charge, with admittance purely on the basis of academic merit.
12. We demand that British citizens shall continue to have access to a state-funded National Health Service, and the state should routinely promote and fund programmes which encourage a physically and mentally healthy lifestyle. Foreigners or visitors will be required to pay for the use of public health services.
13. We demand that the re-zoning of green land for other uses must only occur by absolute national necessity. Policies to protect the environment must be realistic and achievable and not based on impossible goals.
14. We demand that productive private enterprise be bolstered as a cornerstone of British society. Businesses should be encouraged to form co-operatives and collaborate where possible for mutual benefit. The state must support businesses which work towards national economic goals.
15. We demand that all trade unions be amalgamated and the national government assume the duty of the protection of the worker.
16. We demand that all public utilities and transportation networks be placed into public ownership. The only profits they will take will be those required for future investment.
17. We demand that the financial method of endlessly accumulating debt be brought to an end, and that the two principle objectives of fiscal policy be to 1) eliminate debt, and 2) prevent inflation.
18. We demand that tariffs be applied where necessary to protect and foster the development of British enterprises. International capitalism, and its relentless destruction of British industries, must be ended.
19. We demand a welfare system that provides unemployed or destitute persons productive employment as opposed to a dependency income. The welfare system must also include profit margin limitations on rents and property prices.
20. We demand that the British state be controlled by a strong national government, with total authority, whose legitimacy derives directly from the consent of the British citizenry by way of plebiscites and referenda of public approval.
